The Graduate School of Science and Technology Policy (STP) at the Korea Advanced Institute of Science and Technology (KAIST) announces a tenure track position in global science and technology policy. This is an open rank search, inclusive of scholars trained in any disciplinary and methodological traditions within humanities and social sciences, committed to working across intellectual, geographical, and institutional boundaries, and willing to create and lead a new field. International scholars are highly encouraged to apply.

Specialization is open, but we have particular interest in researchers addressing science and technology policy in the context of global challenges and issues. Preference will be given to applicants who combine theoretical and empirical approaches with strong methodological skills. STP plans to strengthen its research capability in these important and promising areas that require multidisciplinary and comparative perspectives. Successful candidates will contribute to efforts to facilitate collaborative scholarship across various departments and programs on campus. The search committee is especially interested in candidates who will contribute to the diversity and excellence of the STP community through their research, teaching and service.
